Official Comments:

The course was in beautiful shape and the race committee and new management team are commended for a well run event. The paddock situation was a new development and will undoubtedly be a work in progress. It is noted that the races were able to stay on schedule throughout the day with this new arrangement.

During the course of the afternoon the Stewards were informed by the course vet, Dr. Rachel Blakey, that trainer Keri Brion was posting videos of her pre-race exams on social media. Brion was not on the grounds during the day, since she was running a horse at Aqueduct. Apparently the videos had been sent to her.

Dr. Blakey said she felt that posting the videos was unprofessional and asked that they be taken down. The Stewards confirmed that the videos were posted and called Brion to request that she remove them. Brion was upset and refused to delete the videos.

After the last race the Stewards, including Safety Steward Norm Fraley, and the Stewards Secretary Bill Gallo, met with Drs. Rachel Blakey and Brooke Harper, the two course veterinarians, to discuss the issue. Both vets confirmed that upon initial presentation at the pre-race exam they are unaware of the owner or trainer of the horse. They reported that if a horse is not 100% sound at the initial presentation they allow the trainer or trainer's representative to represent the horse for a second exam in 15-20 minutes. They confirmed that all but one of the horses that were scratched due to lameness were re-examined at least twice and sometimes three times before making the recommendation to the Stewards to scratch the horse. The one horse that did not return for a second evaluation was due to the trainer's decision.

The Stewards pointed out that they were in no way questioning the determinations or finding of the vets but were simply documenting the pre-race exam procedure as it happens. It was impressed upon Dr. Blakey and Dr. Harper that the NSA is greatly appreciative of their work and that the Stewards on the day are there to protect them from any abusive or unprofessional behavior by anyone.

This matter is hereby referred to the Stewards Advisory Committee for further investigation into a possible violation of the NSA Code of Conduct.
