Other Comments:

The patrol judges all were issued with blue vests which made it easy to spot them to ensure they were in position prior to the race.

The course had had a lot of work done on it, in particular at the water jump, which made it good going despite the rain the previous night. The grass was six to eight inches tall which also helped with the footing not getting more saturated.

As usual, the equine and human medical team was well prepared even though they were, fortunately, not needed.

Respectfully
Charles Fleischmann
