Who We Are

Governance

The National Steeplechase Association (NSA) is the official governance body of American Steeplechase Thoroughbred Horse Racing. In its capacity as the official sanctioning organization of U.S. steeplechase racing, the NSA licenses participants, approves racecourses, trains officials, coordinates race entries, enforces rules, compiles an official database, and oversees the national marketing and public relations of the sport. As an authority and a resource, the NSA provides essential services and information to participants and fans alike.

Our Mission

It is the mission of the NSA to encourage, advance, and regulate the sport of steeplechasing in the United States.

Objectives

- To regulate safe and fair competition by compiling and publishing the Rules of Racing and supervising the enforcement thereof.
- To nurture the highest quality of sport by developing compatible racing programs and coordinating the efforts of sanctioned race meets and licensed owners, trainers, and riders.
- To promote the success of the race meets, and the charities they benefit, by providing resources in the form of information and technical expertise.
- To encourage and supervise steeplechase racing at major tracks so as to extend the popularity of the sport and provide owners, trainers and riders with suitable opportunities to compete.
- To maintain a database of official racing records and to preserve the history of the sport.

What is Steeplechasing?

Steeplechase, also known as Jump Racing, is a Thoroughbred horse racing sport in which the runners jump over a variety of obstacles. In addition to the United States, Steeplechasing has a strong following throughout Ireland, the United Kingdom, Australia, and France.

Timber Racing

Racing over natural wooden fences at a distance of 3-4 miles.

Hurdle Racing

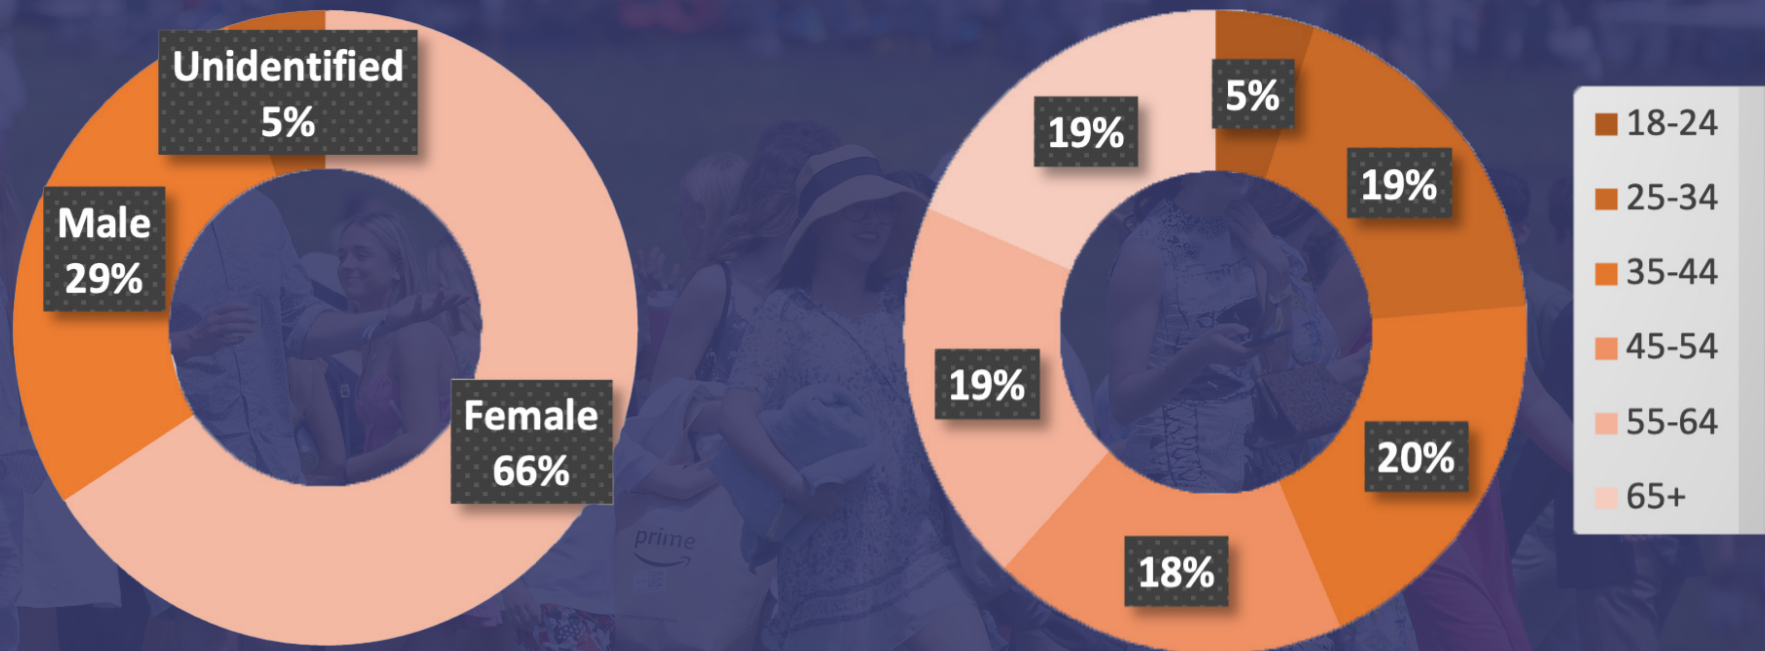

Racing over smaller hurdle fences made of plastic brush over a distance of 2-3 miles.
