Please be advised, due to the PGA Championship golf tournament at Aronimink Golf Club the same weekend as the Races, there may be increased traffic and/or road closures in the Newtown Square area, so plan accordingly.

As we go into the warmer temperatures on racing days, horsemen are reminded that treatment of over-heated horses is based upon science. Those principals are applied by veterinarians attending the horses racing and must be adhered to for the management of heat illness.

Reminder to Horsemen Concerning Heat Illness

The objective is to reduce body heat as quickly as possible and to reduce high brain temperatures. This is accomplished by the application of cold water CONTINUOUSLY to the horse's body and the administration of selected pharmaceuticals intravenously to reduce brain temperatures-most commonly, detomidine. This combination has proven very effective and is based on good research in racing over the past few years. Non-steroidal anti-inflammatory medications may also be used.

The old adage that we should keep the horse moving and forcing them to walk prevents adequate cooling and the efficient administration of the necessary medications by veterinarians. STOP THE HORSE - cool and treat.

No one wants to see a horse go down when struggling with heat and very slow steps forward after treatment may be indicated, but under the supervision of the attending veterinarian. When the horse has made an adequate recovery, then walking or transport may be advised.

Most meets are now set up to provide adequate cooling either with fixed water hoses or portable pressure sprayers followed by cooling fans in the stable area. The portable water tanks with pressure hoses as utilized at many races this spring have been a very useful tool.
